

Marilyn's Memoirs

Preface

My son, Rodney, came across a draft of some stories that his mother, Marilyn, had been working on. This was prepared on an Apple computer, which is no longer available. I had decided to reenter the pages on my computer, and it is in her own words.

A number of additional stories were recently found on the hard drive that was retrieved from the Apple computer. Rodney has been able to have these reformatted so that they can be read on my PC. Some things are still jumbled, but I am working to recapture the essence of her writings as much as possible. These additional stories will be issued shortly.

This is the first of Marilyn's stories – there are many more to come. I hope you find it an interesting read.

It does bring back a lot of memories for me.
